LIFE INSURANCE

The following letter is a copy forwarded by the General Manager of the Royal Bank of Canada to the Secretary of the Life Underwriters:

Montreal, August 1st, 1920

Geo. H. Hunt, Esq.,

Toronto, Ont.

Dear Sir,—Replies to your letter of the 10th inst., in reference to the value of life insurance, I may say that our confidence in a borrower is always enhanced by the fact that he carries a life insurance policy. The wisdom of providing for unforeseen contingencies is an indication of conservatism. Partnership and individual insurance policies assigned to the bank as collateral security for advances, have frequently saved the bank from loss when there was no other visible source of repayment, and saved the man's family from the stigma of debt. Yours truly,

E. L. Poole, Managing Director.

Higher Freight Rates

OTTAWA, Aug. 20.—(Canadian Press)—Because they believe that failure to do so would precipitate a general railway strike throughout Canada, the Canadian Railway Association has decided to recommend to Canadian roads the adoption of the same schedule passed by the Canadian labor board of the United States. This statement was made by Howard G. Kelly, president of the Canadian Railway Association and of the Grand Trunk railway, before the Dominion railway commission Friday. Kelly during the progress of argument for the railways in their application for increases in freight and passenger rates.

Not the Same Here

We have heard so much during the past twenty years about the improvement in rural conditions that has been brought about by the settlement of means of communication that we are hardly prepared for a statement made recently by Mr. H. H. Halbert, M.P. for north Ontario, and former president of the United Farmers of Ontario. According to the report of his speech, he contend ed that the rural life of Canada, instead of progressing and advancing, was going backward, caused largely by the rural mail service and telephone, which put us to the discard the old custom of congregating at the "neighbor's" or at the country stores and post office to talk over events and purchase the necessities of life. This may be the opinion of the average Ontario farmer, though we hardly think so—^{but} it is certainly not that of the farmers of western Canada. There is nothing that they see more rapid than in than in reducing their isolation. They know that to be more closely in touch with the outside world means greater wealth, greater comfort, and that rural progress is firmly bound up with the extension of the facilities that Mr. Halbert condemns. It is an astonishing stand for a leader to take.—Edmonton Journal.

Look to the Foundations

For the first time in the history of the United States the population of the cities and towns at present exceeds the rural population. This is the interesting but at the same time disquieting fact disclosed by the recent census of the republic. While all the figures have not yet been tabulated, examination of the returns is sufficiently far advanced to warrant the above statement, according to officials.

It has, of course, been known for a long time that one of the effects of the wonderful industrial activity brought about in the United States by the war was the exodus of people to the larger centres of population to which they were attracted by the prevailing high wages and by a demand for workers which opened to energetic and capable men, and women, too, splendid opportunities for a rapid advancement. Then, too, thousands of young men drafted from the farms into the army have not returned to the land upon their discharge from military service which, if it did not actually take them overseas, brought them into cantonments and camps on the outskirts of centres of population and introduced them to city life.

The same shifting of population is unfortunately taking place in Canada. While it is doubtful whether the urban population of the Dominion has actually outstripped the rural, as in the United States, we are on the high road to such a development. In the old farming Province of Ontario this has already taken place, and but for the fact that the three prairie provinces are still dominantly rural, the figures for Canada might easily be similar to those of the United States.

Proportionately it is said that 50,000 fewer Canadians are engaged in agriculture today than in 1872. According to a recent speech by the Ontario Minister of Agriculture, 30 percent of the population some 48 years ago lived in towns and 70 percent in the country. Today the figures are almost exactly reversed — the 70 percent in Ontario live in the towns.

In a recent article in this column the question was asked as to what was the explanation, and certain views were expressed as to steps that might be taken to check this disastrous tendency on the part of young people to leave away from the land. Nothing is more natural, however, by thinking the first more generally recognized and admitted, that the industrial advancement of the Dominion has been encouraged at the expense of the agricultural. Country life has not been made attractive enough at a time when the attractions of city life have multiplied amazingly; farming has not been sufficiently remunerative during a period when mounting wages coupled with steadily shorter hours of labor have called them away from the cities.

The natural, the inevitable result is the increase in the consuming public and the decrease in the number of producers. As Hon. Mr. Doherty put it: "We have believed that big business stocks well happiness and prosperity . . . But the real solution of all our troubles is increased agricultural production." Who can question this?

Surveys of the monetary equivalent of the return of the average farmer in the Dominion were recently made showing that the majority were earning less than $1,000 a year. Thirty cents an hour was the average wage of both a farm and his wife on a 100-acre farm in the year of the armistice — a figure which the unskilled city laborer and charwoman would reject with scorn. Needless to say such a return is in itself sufficient to explain why the second generation deserts the farm, without giving consideration to other factors in the problem.

There never was a time when the agricultural industry needed more generous assistance and encouragement. It calls for the best thought on the part of all Governments and public bodies. The Dominion is growing too heavy, and while those at the top may not at the moment fully realize their danger, they are occupying a perilous position, and to their own interests and for their future self-protection it is high time they began to look to the agricultural foundations upon which all industry in Canada primarily rests.

The South African Sweet

A remarkable sweet substance in the leaves of a South African plant was brought to notice several years ago, and was declared to be 180 times as sweet as sugar. The material has been found to be not sugar, but saccharin. The plant seems to have been difficult to cultivate, but the U. S. Department of Agriculture has succeeded in raising a number of ounces of the dried leaves and a small quantity of the seed. The leaves are reported to be as sweet as saccharin, the saccharin coal tar product.

Crop Prospects

Estimates Wheat Yield 250,000,000 Bushels

Canada's wheat fields will yield from 226,000,000 to 250,000,000 bushels this year. This estimate has been made by W. A. Black, vice-president and managing director of the Ogilvie Milling Company, and is based upon crop reports received by the company from its agents. Compared with last year's yield, this is an increase of 50,000,000 to 75,000,000 bushels.

Peddle German Money

Smart Salesmen From U. S. Pick Up Fortune in Ontario

It is reported that two smart salesmen from across the line, both of German descent, have been peddling German marks, or coupons therefore, through the German settlements of western Ontario, particularly around Hamilton, Taylorville and Shakespeare. They are said to bring a commission of fifty cents on the dollar, and have taken in over a hundred thousand dollars in a week. Apparently they are working on behalf of New York curio brokers.

The people among whom they are working are extremely conservative, and prior to leave their money at three and a half percent in the savings bank than risk it in speculation. But the appeal is racial. They are told that the money they invest will help to put the fatherland on its feet, and that when with the mark restored to par value, they will make a great profit. needless to say they are paying a great deal more than current exchange for the mark, which they could buy over any Canadian bank counter.

Among the victims it is said that two old Mennonite ladies took their life savings of ten thousand dollars out of the savings bank and invested the money in German marks at two or three times their current value price.

Indians Have Good Crops

Indians in the three prairie provinces will have an excellent crop this year, according to information to W. M. Graham, Commissioner at Regina. They have approximately 70,000 acres in crop, roughly divided as follows:

Saskatchewan, 30,000 acres; Alberta, 25,000; and Manitoba, 15,000.

Another Interesting Letter From Turkey

By Mrs. D. C. Eby.

Constantinople, July 19, 1920

Dear Ones at Home—

Greetings. How much nicer it would be if we could walk in and have a good long talk with you this afternoon instead of trying to write. It seems so long since we have heard from anyone at home that I hardly know where to start to tell you all the news.

The last part of February all the roads were cut off by the brigands or cheches, as they call themselves. They are rebels and have set up a government of their own at Angora, with Mustafa Kemal as their leader. Their object, they said, was to drive out the French from Cilicia, and to regain a much of the country as they can. They have no love for any of the Allied powers and would like to get rid of all foreigners.

Though there were a French at Hadjin, yet some arms and ammunition had been given to the Armenians by the French so they demanded the Armenians to surrender; this they felt they could not do as they would no doubt be all killed if they did. A terrible massacre had taken place at Marash just a short time before this.

It was about the 10th of March that the shotes came to Romoli; the Armenians fled to Hadjin and in a few days they were fighting around Hadjin. The Hadjin people were not able to hold the mountain peaks, so gradually withdrew into the city.

Our compound being outside the city, the ches came down and surrounded us and our family of about 20 children on the 9th of April. It is to say the least, was an exciting time.

All morning they kept firing in the compound, and as there was no return fire, they came down. One of the girls on going out for water was shot in the leg. Mrs. Eby and Miss Gold were also shot at, but nothing.

While waiting for them to come in knowing what they would do, we were told they would kill us or not. We heard a man calling for me.

I thought, though bullet were flying all around, the only thing was to run and see what would happen.

It was a note from the commandant saying that if there was any fire from the compound that he would not be responsible for our lives.

came in the houses, so we had to the mercy of the Turks. The Armenians had defended themselves from Parion Greeks who were to attack the compound for three days while they were taking in supplies that he had stored up in the compound. During that time bullets were coming in the house everywhere. The machine gun, rifle fire, as well as the cannon, was turned on us. Fortunately the Turks did not hit the buildings but exploded in the valley below the buildings. We had to stay in a dark cellar under the stairs as it was the only safe place in the whole house.

When the Turks came they ordered us out and began shooting everything. They only gave us a few minutes to get ready. All we could get was what we could get in a saddle bag. And of the ten horses of the missionaries we could only get one. All the rest were shot or stolen or taken from us. The Turks took us as far as Tabriz, from where we went by relief motor truck to Samouson on the Black Sea, 100 miles, from there by steamer to Constantinople. We are here now waiting for orders.

We would like to go back to Mesopotamia to see if we could save some of our people if they are spared. You can write to us in care of Dr. W. W. Peet, American Bible House, Constantinople.

ROBBED AND RESCUED

BY BRIGANDS

The Wild Hordes Descent

They came swarming down upon us that morning from the mountains round about—wild hordes of Turks, Kurds and Circassians, a numerous crew of ranged, savage looking creatures with swarthy skin and sullen faces. A few of the simple villages came in with them, engaging us at once in friendly conversation, and for a brief space of time our hopes rose. But these were soon dashed as some of the worst outlaws in Turkey with their wicked bands appeared on the scene. The evil numerous gleamed in their flashing dark eyes bared us all good.

Arab Ali, one of the worst of the bandit leaders, roughly ordered us off the compound. "We have driven the French out of the country, and we don't want the Americans here either," he said, and sitting down he began, with the aid of his servants,

CHAPTER VIII.

Gloss, standing in the kitchen doorway, gazed outward across the bronzed trees to the drab-colored sky resting above Rond East.

There was a chill in her lips and her eyes were alive with the light of genuine girl happiness. She did not know why she should be so glad today; she felt like singing; like racing out into the hardwoods and tramping along the long leaf-carpeted aisle—she wanted to be out in the open.

A flock of wild geese waded their way between two tiny strips of blue sky and were lost in a heavy snow cloud above the Point. The girl clapped her hands joyfully and, springing backward like a young gazelle, she snatched her cap from a peg and tiptoed into the inner room.

Granny McTavish looked up from her knitting, a smile on her wrinkled face.

"Lass," she said softly, "ye are gettin' fair like your dear mither every day. And she was bonnie, ay, she was bonnie lassie!"

The girl sank on her knees and took the old hands in hers.

"Am I like my mither, Granny, she asked eagerly. "Very like her?"

"Aye, lassie, ye have her eyes and ye have her beautiful hair; ye have her face and ye have her smile. Ye take me back to the time I first saw your mither, Gloss. Ye will nae goin' out o' th' snow, pet," now with concern that Gloss had on her cap and coat. "I never let a girl see ye trottin' about in the woods after th' snow falls on account o' th' wolves, lassie."

"And she was beautiful and I am like her," said the girl softly, "O! Granny, I'm beginnin' to miss my mither!"

"Cheerful, cheerful," said the old woman, drawing the girl over to her bosom. "It's ever the way. The mither is missed always, but the baird comes miss her like the woman. And ye are growin' into a woman, Gloss; ye are growin' into a woman, lassie!"

She picked up her knitting and receded to and fro, crooning to herself. The girl arose and, bending, kissed her softly on the smooth white hair. Then she crossed the kitchen and peeped into the larger of the bedrooms.

"She's sleepin', lass; best sleep away and no disturb her," whispered Granny. "She'll no last much longer, dearie; she'll no last much longer, I fear."

A look of sorrow came into the girl's eyes and her mouth trembled. "God won't let her die, Granny," she said chokingly; "He knows we need her so much."

"May He help her th' mair, lassie!"

"No, no, He can't. And Granny, she wouldn't—the wouldn't be happy away from Boy and—w—w—"

"Ye dinna ken, lassie; it's a d—daken; it's a braw world and your mither has been lookin' for her comf' full lang, I haud no doot. They were great friends. They loved an' an' next week—

"But mother would not mind waitin' some longer, Granny. I know she would rather let another live a while longer for our sakes. She has got to be satisfied."

"Lass, you maun cry," said the old woman gently. "If she gang awa' it will be God's good pleasure. If she hides 'twull be His Mercy. We will hope an' pray for the best, Glossie."

When Gloss sought the wood a while, sweet-scented mist was rising from the leafy carpet where a thin film of snow had rested. The low calls of the feathered denizens of the Wild sounded hollow and faintest from the softwood swales, for the sky was changing to the slate-blue of even-tide. Down in the sunnier potato-patch Boy and Big McTavish were busily engaged in turning the snowy tubers out of the black soil.

Gloss shifted the patch, keeping a thicker between her and the workers, and passed on southward until she reached a wide ridge of giant beech trees, whose long arms were fringed with the toothsome nuts which the first frost of autumn would send in a shower to the earth.

Black and red squirrels were busy among the trees, garnering their food. They worked noisily, chattering and scoldling. They were a busy little body of workers, and they could not afford to pay much attention to the wood-nymph whom they had become accustomed to see in their kingdom. The old-time rustiness and happiness had stolen back to the heart of the girl. Her great eyes were alive with light and joy, and she passed on, humming a merry tune to herself, drinking in the golden beauty, the songs, and the scent of nature.

Beyond a tangled clump of trees, Gloss came unexpectedly upon another creature of the wood. A young doe was browsing among the tender shoots of the brush-pile, and at the girl's soft footsteps it lifted its shapeless head and stood quivering, its nostrils dilated and its sides heaving. And so the two animals of the Wild gazed at each other with a deep and growing wonder.

Nature had built those two after the same fashion. Both were slender and graceful; both were alert and watchful; both possessed long-lashed eyes; both were wild, free and beautiful.

The doe stood with her slender muzzle lifted, her sensitive lips a-tremble, her timid eyes fastened upon the girl of the forest, who instinctively, she felt, would do her no harm.

For a moment the two creatures stood gazing at each other. The doe moved forward timidly and plucked another mouthful of the juicy twigs, then with a sudden start leaped into the chicken-wire on the right.

Gloss turned quickly. A little man with a small face fringed with whiskers, and bright blue eyes blinking from beneath a copper-skinned cap, stepped out from behind a tree and lowered the hammer of his long rifle.

"Jinks and ironwoold!" he ejaculated. "You stand right in my way, Glossie. I'd o' had that doe sure pop if I hadn't been a trifte timid about himn you!"

"Did—did you want to shoot that pretty little thing, Ander?" asked Gloss, her cheeks aflame. "Well, I don't know," laughed the little man, coming forward. "I tell you that was as fine a doe as I've seen this season, girl!"

"Poor thing," sighed Gloss; then hotly, "I'm glad she got away; I'm glad she got away."

"Somebody else'll get her," said the man. "She's pretty tame and she'll get shot sooner or later."

The girl stood looking away through the wood.

"Ander," she said, "I know you're a pretty good man. I want you to promise me that you won't shoot things—things like her. It's terrible. Why, they are so young, they don't know any danger. You'll give them all a chance, won't you?"

Deukle looked puzzled, scratched his head and grimed; then he looked down.

"Why, I don't mind promisin' that he stammered. "I shat' carin' much to shoot—any deer without givin' it somethin' of a chance. And I will say that to shoot em' without goin' somethin' agin' my grain. All right, Gloss, old Ander'll promise not to shoot that doe or any other like it. Dang me, but you and her seemed a lot, a lot alike to me somehow, I reckon I'm good enough of a shot to have got by you girl; but somethin' kept my rifle down—see? you two lookin' at each other—her eyes, your eyes—well, I can't say what makes me think you two are alike, but you are. Now listen, Ander won't say any more does—at least, not this season. Now, Gloss, I want you to come along over to my place and see my missus. She's bound to have

Land Cheaper in Canada

Being Rapidly Taken Up By United States Settlers

Government land in Canada, especially in the Peace River district, will soon be taken up by emigrants from the United States, according to Col. Ellsworth Walters, of Shreveport, Okla. Anna, Col. Walters is the official government land auctioneer for the Osage Indians in Oklahoma, and has in his time auctioned off 27,000,000 acres of land. "Land throughout the midwestern states has gone up enormously in price," he said. "The other day I auctioned off land in South Dakota at $525 an acre. There is plenty of cheaper land in Canada, which is just as good for agriculture, and owing to the fact there is bound to be a great influx of settlers from the south to the uncultivated lands in Western Canada."

Scientist Starts On Expedition

Will Attempt to Reach North Point Danish Greenland

An attempt to reach North Point and thus complete the Danish exploration of North Greenland, will be made by Lange Koch, the young Danish scientist and Polar explorer. The aim of his expedition, which is expected to last about two years, aside from scientific purposes, is to secure Danish sovereignty of all Greenland.

Koch, who in the capacity of geologist, participated in Knud Rasmussen's last expedition, hopes to reach Inglefield Gulf by motorship and in August or December will endeavor to establish a depot 250 miles north east of there. A mechanic will be the only white man to accompany him, the other members of the expedition being Eskimos.

Henry Ford has placed an ice-crawling tractor at Koch's disposal.

Air Route Across Rockies

Landing Fields at Intervals of 100 Miles Have Been Located

Captain C. McEwen, of the Canada Air Board, who has been touring the Rocky Mountains for the past five weeks has been successful in solving the biggest problem in connection with the trans-Canada aeroplane route—the location of landing places in the mountains.

He has been successful in locating landing fields at 100 mile intervals between Calgary and Vancouver although the task was somewhat difficult as one of the essentials in connection with the location of an aerodrome is that it be close to a railroad in order that gasoline may be easily obtained.

Capt. McEwen expects to make a trans-Canada flight, and is confident that he can accomplish the return trip from Halifax to Vancouver in six days.

The Only Real Nerve Tonic Is A Good Supply of Rich, Red Blood

"If people would only attend to their blood, instead of worrying themselves ill," said an eminent nerve specialist, "we doctors would have less work to do." Most people suffer from worry than anything else."

The sort of thing which the specialist spoke of is nervous tension, a condition caused by overwork and the many anxieties of today. Sufferers find themselves tired, half-spirited and unable to keep their minds on anything. And suddenly they are full of boundless fear and do not sleep well at night. Headaches and other nerve pains are part of the misery, and it all comes from nervous tension.

Doxicing the nerves with poisonous fets is a terrible mistake. The only real nerve tonic is a good supply of rich, red blood, which helps to rouse nervousness and rundown health. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills should be taken. These pills make new, rich blood, which strengthens the nerves, improves the complexion, gives new strength and spirits, and makes hitherto despondent people bright and cheerful. If you are at all out of sorts, you should begin taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Nature Helps to Kill Insects

Naturalists Discovered That Each Insect Has Particular Enemy

Australia is to receive from us a consignment of a certain sort of fly which is the natural enemy of the blowfly or bluebottle. The bluebottle has become a fearful pest in Australia simply because it has no enemies in that country, and in 1912 was responsible for the destruction of three million pounds worth of sheep.

If a steer gets a cut or sore, the blowfly lays its eggs on the raw spot, and when these hatch the grubs literally eat the unfortunate creature.

Similar experiments have been tried before in the way of exterminating man's insect enemies, and with great success. Some years ago the Australian scale insect was accidentally imported into California. It at once fastened on the orange trees and the destruction was fearful. It looked as if the orange groves of California were doomed, for all the washes and insecticides proved useless to stay the plague.

After a while, orange growers, in despair, sent a party of naturalists to Australia to investigate. They found that in Australia the scale insect was kept down by the cardinal taybird. They collected a hundred of these and brought them alive to California. From these they bred ten thousand, and the next spring turned them loose in the orange districts.

Scale disappeared like magic, and thousands of trees which had been covered with a white leprosy growth of scale, suddenly assumed new life. —Princeton's Weekly.

Mexico Wants Sir George Bury To Reconstruct Railways

Sir George Bury, for many years vice-president and in charge of the Canadian Pacific railway, and more recently general manager of the pulp interests at Vancouver, has been invited to take charge of the reconstruction and management of the national railways of Mexico.

Sir George is on his way to New York where he will consult with the bondholders' committee from whom the lines will be taken over. The Mexican government has offered the position to Bury and it is said that he has decided to accept.

Sir George is known as one of the best operating and construction railway men of the continent, and during the war went to Russia at the request of the Allies to co-ordinate the brokering on railways of that empire.
